

Military Toronto – World War II

In 1868, a year after Confederation, Canada was divided into a number of military districts. While the number and organization has varied over the years, from the beginning Toronto has been located in Military District

2. Military Districts were phased out by a military reorganization after World War 2

Here are Military Post Office 201 marks that were used at the CNE grounds during World War II.

